Circle Monday, Sept. 26, on your calendars, and join fellow Guild members for the opening meeting of the St. Louis AGO Chapter’s 2005-2006 season. The evening will begin in the church’s Fellowship Hall with a reception at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30. At 7:30, Dean Stephen Mager will conduct a short business meeting to introduce committee members and present an overview of the programs for the year. He will also give a progress report on plans for the Pipe Organ Encounter in June. There are still many opportunities to get involved with this event. (See story about your fellow members named to lead committees for this event in this issue.)

The evening will close with a worship service in the sanctuary, featuring the 28-rank Harrison & Harrison pipe organ installed in Hope church in 2002. The Rev. Sarah Fredericksen-McCann will be the guest speaker. After the service, there will be “open console” time for you to have a look at the instrument.

About the Harrison & Harrison organ

Harrison & Harrison designed the casework of American red oak and the facade pipes of spotted metal, reflecting the character of the space. The builder used electro-pneumatic action with slider chests and traditional wind reservoirs, which facilitate the divided layout and allow the console to be mobile. It also enables use of slightly higher wind pressure for the color reed stops: 5 inches for the chorus reeds on the Swell; 6 inches for the Pedal reed, and 10 inches for the Festival Trumpet.

Remodeling and refurbishment of the meeting space was accomplished before the organ was installed, allowing for improved acoustic response.

Organ Scholarship

The Music Department at Missouri State University, Springfield, Mo., announces the availability of the Kiefer-Young Organ Scholarship beginning in the 2006-2007 academic year. This full-tuition scholarship is renewable for up to four years. The facilities of the Music Department include a 40-rank Casavant organ, a practice pipe organ, three harpsichords and a 48-bell carillon. For more information, contact Jeremy Chesman, assistant professor of music, jac2121@missouri state.edu or 417-836-3028.

New Missouri Harmony

The St. Louis Shape Note Singers, in conjunction with the Missouri Historical Society, has published a new edition of The Missouri Harmony. Five years of meticulous editing have resulted in a volume which does not duplicate any hymns in The Sacred Harp, and which includes new tunes from the last two decades. The introductory section contains essays by Pete Ellertsen, Karen Isbell, Judy Hauff, and Ann Lecke. The book can be purchased from St. Louis Shape Note Singers members, or at the Missouri Historical Society gift shop for ($20.95, call 314-454-3172).

Being an Apologist Means You Never Have to Say You’re Sorry

In its early history, the Christian Church was challenged to defend its theological and moral principles from misunderstanding, misinterpretation, and misrepresentation. The Church fathers responded vigorously, preaching and writing as apologists for the Faith, to explain, teach, and certify the tenets of orthodox Christianity. Today orthodoxy (lower case) is sometimes viewed as reactionary, but after all, a house without its foundation cannot stand, and we owe much to those spiritual forebears who sought to define, preserve and hand down to us our Christian tradition.

Johann Sebastian Bach, sometimes called the “Fifth Evangelist,” was himself such an apologist, in the cause of sacred music. Active in a period of great tension between Lutheran orthodoxy and Pietism, he was an avowed proponent of a “well-regulated church music,” and thus aligned himself with the orthodox. This is in part why he remained at the pietist Blasius-kirche in Mühlhausen for such a short time, and eventually made his way to Leipzig, a stronghold of Lutheran orthodoxy. Nonetheless, it is significant that he incorporated elements of a more personal piety in his music. For example, he has given us many inspired settings of the pietist chorale Jesu, meine Freude, clearly one of his favorite hymns. Though he never compromised his artistry, he developed amid the prevailing doctrinal conflict of the time a means of balancing public and private spirituality. This balance is in part why his music speaks so eloquently to us today.

As church musicians, we are similarly called to be apologists for sacred music. Like Bach, we live in an age of tremendous tension between the communal and the personal in worship. It may be that, for the present, pietism of a sort has the upper hand in the minds of many confessed believers. The art historian Kenneth Clark suggested that, if Descartes proposed ‘I think, therefore I am,’ it was Rousseau who responded, in effect, ‘I feel, therefore I am’—a point of view that has only just taken a firm hold in the last few generations. Inevitably, it is tempting to equate a lively emotional response with religious conviction. I certainly don’t presume to judge the spiritual paths of others, but I fear that, in the face of such human atrocities as civil injustice, mercantile exploitation, social violence, aggressive war, and genocide, faith build on good feelings won’t carry us very far.

How can we defend our work, our holy purpose, in an apologetic way? Like the apologists of the early Church, we need to be vigilant for opportunities to explain, teach, and clarify, in an accessible way, the foundation and meaning of the music we play. We are called to be educators as well as performers. In fairness, let us be mindful, without any condescension, of people’s limited musical experience, today more than ever. It has been said of Martin Luther’s vernacular translation of Scripture that it is written in quite beautiful and effective German. I know a smattering of German, but limited as I am, I could not say whether Luther’s Bible is well-written or not. Likewise, beautiful and profound as our music may be, we cannot presume musical understanding of many of our listeners. Such a grasp of musical thought is becoming a rare commodity, and it is up to us to do all we can to reintroduce and cultivate it.

Surely we need to find more quality expressions of a new piety, and fresher expressions of the old. But as Sebastian Bach recognized, we have a legacy of artistry that we cannot afford to compromise, lest in time it should be sacrificed altogether.

Pipe Organ Encounter Update — We’re On the Way

Education is our watchword this year, as our Pipe Organ Encounter (POE) is off and running. We recently received the following note from Naomi Rowley, national POE coordinator:

Dear Stephen,

It was indeed a pleasure to visit with you several weeks ago regarding the St. Louis Chapter’s POE. Your idea of working with Martin Ott to develop an organ-building unit with “hands on” activity for the students is wonderful! You may even wish to consider offering a daily session on the topic. (Some chapters at previous POEs have found this scheduling technique provides students with more in-depth exposure to a specific skill or area of study.)

Naomi

As you can see, there is considerable “national” enthusiasm for our POE already. Naomi tells us that this particular feature of our POE, the “hands-on” project, is unique among POE institutes. Our thanks to Martin Ott. It’s HIS idea!!

We still need to appoint the following personnel — secretary-registrar, service coordinator(s), and funding coordinator.

The following Chapter members have agreed to fill positions on the POE Executive Committee:

Mary Hitchcock-Reinhart, CAGO, director
Yvonne Sullivan, CAGO, co-director
Denis Doelling, treasurer
Dr. Kathleen Bolduan and Dr. Marie Kremer, facilities committee co-chairs
Dr. Barbara Raedeke, faculty coordinator
Dr. John Romeri, AAGO, publicity coordinator
Stephen Mager, AAGO, ex officio

Besides these folks, we will need quite a few additional “hands” as we get closer to the event. Why not get involved? You will be motivated by the interest and enthusiasm of our young students, as well as providing a great service for your chapter.

Marie Kremer Receives Honor

Congratulations to chapter member Dr. Marie J. Kremer on being named National Pastoral Musician of the Year by the National Association of Pastoral Musicians at their recent national convention in Milwaukee, Wis. The award is given in recognition of faithful service of the church at prayer, steadfast leadership and support of colleagues in ministry, and continuing commitment to form a new generation of musicians. Marie has been very active in the Association and served for 10 years on the national board of directors, as well as local chapter director. She also chaired the two St. Louis national conventions of the Association.

And while we’re extending congratulations, we can’t overlook our dean, Stephen Mager, who was recently notified of his passing the Guild’s Associate examination, allowing him to use the AAGO designation after his name. He asked the editor to “sneak” the change in on the officers’ list. But the editor is risking his job and including a hearty “pat on the back” in this space.

Send Your e-Mail Address To Get Online Chapter News

We ask that all chapter members keep us up-to-date with your most accessible e-mail address. We are compiling a list for mass e-mailing. If you received an August e-mail bulletin, you are already on the list. If you didn’t receive it and would like to be included for future bulletins, please send your address to Dean Stephen Mager at scmager@aol.com. You will recognize chapter messages by the heading, AGO-St. Louis Chapter News Bulletin, sent to you by the dean. If your e-mail account screens bulk messages, please include dean’s address above in the order to receive bulletins.

We Remember...

Dr. Rudolph J. Kremer, former St. Louis AGO chapter member, who died July 26 at his home in Chapel Hill, N.C. Dr. Kremer studied with St. Louisan Howard Kelsey. He was a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and Washington University. He went to Vienna, Austria, as a Fulbright scholar and was the first American student of the renowned organist, Anton Heiller. He served as university organist at at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., for several years before moving to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where he held the post of university organist for 29 years.

Survivors include his wife, Marianne, who will be remembered as an outstanding pianist, four sons and five grandchildren.

Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous

The French-Belgian composer André Grétry (1741-1813) was, during his lifetime, an acclaimed composer of opera, masses, and chamber music. A gifted melodist, his scores were somewhat lacking in harmonic interest. It was said that, due to the thinness of his harmonies, “one might drive a coach-and-four between the bass and the first violin.” He achieved worldly success, at least, was elected a charter member of the Paris Institute, received the Légion d’Honneur, and was granted a pension by Napoléon. Upon being introduced to Napoléon, the Emperor asked him, “What is your name?” The composer dutifully answered, “‘Grétry, Your Highness.’”

Sometime later, the musician was again presented to Napoléon, who was reputedly little interested in music. The Emperor again asked, “What is your name?” Answered the composer, “Alas, your Highness, still ‘Grétry.’”
